

Announcements and News from Miss Trenkamp

This coming week, the students will begin learning about surface area and volume in math. In science, the students will begin their next unit on the effects of natural hazards. In religion, the students will learn about the prophets and the covenant with David. In social studies, the students will continue to compare the dynasties of medieval China. In reading, the students will read the class novel, review text-structures, and take the reading NWEA.

On Thursday, the students will take the spring reading NWEA test. I encourage the students to put their best effort forth as always. Please encourage the students to get a good night sleep the night before and a good breakfast that morning. While the students are not defined by their score, it is a very helpful tool to measure the students' growth throughout the year.

I have conferenced with each student a couple of times this week, and the students should be proud of the progress they are making. I am seeing an increase in organization, responsibility, and effort from the entire class. I am encouraging them to continue these habits to end the year on a strong note.

Finally, with the spring season comes spring activities! I love to see the kids out and about outside of school. If they happen to have a home game or event please email me the date/time and I will do my best to make it!

Blessings,

Jordan Trenkamp

What did we do last week?

This week, the students continued making connections to the novel A Wrinkle In Time. We had many wonderful conversations in which the students were able to make connections to their faith! In social studies, the students began looking at the dynasties, religion, and technologies of medieval China. In science, the students concluded their unit on geoscience processes. In math, the students concluded their chapter on area. In religion, the students dove into the stories of David and Goliath, Saul, and the Fall of Jericho.
