

Announcements and News from Miss Trenkamp

Next week, the students will review and compare the Patriarchs in religion. In math, the students will review before their test. In social studies, the students will end their unit with writing in cuneiform on clay. In science, the students will begin their models of seafloor spreading. In reading, the students will continue to read and learn about others through biographies. In writing, the students will finish their persuasive essays.

Next week will be a busy week for students in terms of assignments. It will be beneficial to them to study or work ahead a little each night, so they don't become overwhelmed next week.

Students worked this week on getting back into routines and setting themselves up for success for the rest of the year. This is something that we will as a class continue to work on, so that the students continue to develop positive habits.

The students all set third quarter goals, and I was able to meet with them to discuss specific steps that will help them achieve those goals. I emphasized to all of the students that the biggest piece of reaching their goals is their attitude. If they do their best, and intentionally work hard they will see growth.

Throughout the year, I love to support the students outside of the classroom as well. If the students happen to have a home event for an extra curricular, I would love to attend. Please email me possible dates and locations as they come up!

Blessings,

Jordan Trenkamp

What did we do last week?

This week, the students explored seafloor spreading, and who originally discovered seafloor spreading. In social studies, the students explored the culture and life of Ancient Mesopotamia. In reading, the students began their unit on biographies. In math, the students worked on factoring and simplifying expressions. In religion, the students learned about the Patriarch Joseph. In writing, the students began their persuasive writing assignment.
