

Announcements and News from Miss Trenkamp

Next week, the students will have a busy week to kick off fourth quarter and head into spring break. In religion, the students will review Holy Week. In math, the students will review and take their chapter 8 test. Additionally, they will be introduced to using the operations with integers. In science, the students will work on a presentation to share examples of weathering, deposition, and erosion. In social studies, the students will review the Renaissance and take an open note quiz. In reading, the students will conclude their mystery unit and the Westing Game novel. In writing, the students will finish their writing prompts on monsters!

This coming week, students will have an opportunity to set one last goal to end the year strong! The students have already accomplished quite a bit this year! With this goal, I am encouraging the students to set a goal that they feel will most set them up for success going into next school year. I will ask them to reflect on areas they feel they have grown in this year, and then decide what goal will best help them end the year on a strong note.

I will be working on updating grades in FACTS over the weekend, so you can see where your student ended for third quarter. The reports cards will be available to you in FACTS by spring break.

Blessings,

Jordan Trenkamp

What did we do last week?

This week in religion, the students reviewed ways the Ten Commandments are actively applied to their lives. In math, the students learned how to graph and solve inequalities. In science, the students learned about the differences between weathering, erosion, and deposition. In social studies, the students read about the Ancient Renaissance and completed a WebQuest. In reading, the students worked on their book reports and uncovered the mystery of the Westing Game.
