

Announcements and News from Miss Trenkamp

This coming week, the students will continue to review the geologic processes and take an open-note quiz in science. In math, the students will conclude the chapter by finding the area of composite shapes prior to taking their test. In reading, the students will be working on making text connections while reading A Wrinkle In Time. In social studies, the students will begin learning about the dynasties of Medieval China. In religion, the students will dive back into the Old Testament with David, Goliath, Saul, and the Fall of Jericho. In writing, the students will work on editing their writing prompts and identifying the parts of a prepositional phrase.

Next week, the students will have an opportunity to meet with me to go over their last goal they set for the year. I can see already that the students are in the mindset to finish strong. I will support them in continuing this effort level through the end of the school year.

I hope everyone enjoyed a restful Easter and spring break. It sounds like while it was a busy time for most students it was enjoyable as well. I am encouraging the students to use this rejuvenation to finish with their strongest quarter yet!

Finally, with the spring season comes spring activities! I love to see the kids out and about outside of school. If they happen to have a home game or event please email me the date/time and I will do my best to make it!

Blessings,

Jordan Trenkamp

What did we do last week?

This week, the students reviewed the season of Easter in religion. In math, the students began their geometry unit with finding the area of triangles, parallelograms, and trapezoids in math. In social studies, the students began their unit on Ancient China by completing a virtual tour and a fact find. In science, the students began identifying effects of time and size on geologic processes. In reading, the students began their fantasy unit, and began the class novel A Wrinkle In Time.
