

Announcements and News from Miss Trenkamp

This coming week, the students will be finishing their final book report and playing the games they created with their classmates. In reading, the students will also be diving back into non-fiction passages. In math, the students will learn about different graphs used to show data. In science, the students will work with a partner to research a specific topic related to Earth Science. In social studies, the students will explore the Feudal System, and the lives of Knights. In religion, the students will connect the prophecies from the Old Testament to the New Testament. In writing, the students will conclude their final writing prompt.

The students collectively have been working really hard to make this their best quarter of the year. I am encouraging them to finish strong and power through! The last day I can accept any assignments for this final quarter is May 26th.

With the end of the year slowly approaching, I will be starting the process of checking for missing books from the classroom library. If you could have your student check for any books they borrowed from the classroom library and return them that would be great! If I have a list once I am done checking books, I will email that out.

The students are beginning to feel the summer itch. I am working with them to continue putting forth their best effort and following all classroom expectations until the last day we are together.

Blessings,

Jordan Trenkamp

What did we do last week?

This week, the students concluded their novel study of A Wrinkle In Time with a movie study and a book quiz. In science, the students concluded their unit on the water cycle with a variety of reviews. In social studies, the students concluded their unit on Medieval China with a variety of reviews and a quiz. In religion, the students concluded their Theology of the Body studies focusing on identifying their gifts and how they can use them in the world. In math, the students began learning about different statistical measures that can be used with data and practiced with skittles!
